BIG PULL USED IN A DOPE CASE

Tom Fong was acquitted yesterday afternoon in the justice court where he was charged with being an accessory of Barney Knowles in an alleged holdup by which the latter was said to have secured $140 from Charley Poy. The only testimony indicating any complicity was advanced by W. J. Otis in the form of written statements purporting to have been made by George Horsley and Laura Edwards. Otis took an active part in the proceeding until Judge Jack Thompson, attorney for defendant, demanded by what authority he appeared and if it were true that he was a special investigator of the district attorney's office. Lowell Daniels disclaimed any knowledge of Otis connection with his office and the court admonished Otis to remain quiet during the proceedings. Horsley and the Edwards woman admitted having signed the statements and explained that they had been paid by Poy who told them that whatever they put in writing would not be used in court as it was intended solely for newspaper use. These witnesses said they were introduced to Otis as a "news-paperman." On the stand the witnesses denied every allegation in the statements bearing their signatures.

The action grows out of a sale by Knowles of four small bottles of crystals which were alleged to be cocaine. These were the property of Fong and were delivered to Poy who on examination found the contents were simply rock salt. The object of keeping these crystals in the shape of original packages with the trade mark of the maker is surmised to have been to blind the police should they raid the place and attempt to secure evidence by taking the bottles as it would require expert analysis to prove the contents were harmless.

With Flying Squadron of Suffrage in East

Yesterday afternoon, at the home of Mrs. S. H. Moore, Mrs. Hugh Brown gave to the ladies of Tonopah an account of her experiences as a member of the "Flying Squadron," the company of forty-eight women who were chosen by the American Suffrage association to represent their respective states in a campaign in Connecticut for the ratification of the Susan B. Anthony amendment. As thirty-five states have already ratified the amendment, Connecticut became the storm center and resulted in the most picturesque and dramatic move that proponents of the cause of votes for women have ever carried through. Tonopah feels justly proud that the woman who represented Nevada has long been a resident of this city.

To a Bonanza reporter Mrs. Brown said this morning:

"Every moment of it was thrilling. Every man and woman in the country ought to know about it, for it is one of the dramatic milestones in the history of the United States. I found myself a very small frog among those distinguished women, most of whom have national reputations as orators. Mrs. Dora Brock-Uitendoe was there. She is the grand-
